The Ph.D. by Published Works (Ph.D. P.W.) is a fast track doctoral degree that allows students to earn a doctorate based on their previously published research. This degree is typically designed for experienced professionals who have already made significant contributions to their field and who wish to further their education without having to complete traditional coursework and dissertation requirements.

The Ph.D. P.W. is not a new degree. In fact, the first Ph.D. P.W. was awarded in the United States in 1876. However, the degree has become increasingly popular in recent years, as more and more professionals seek to advance their careers without having to take a break from their work or family obligations.

There are many advantages to pursuing a Ph.D. P.W. degree. First, it is a fast track degree that can be completed in as little as two years. Second, it is a flexible degree that can be tailored to the individual student's needs and interests. Third, it is a cost-effective degree that does not require students to pay for traditional coursework or dissertation supervision.

If you are a professional who has already made significant contributions to your field and who wishes to further your education, then the Ph.D. P.W. degree may be the right option for you. Here is a list of 45 schools that offer the Ph.D. P.W. degree:
