- Lance Armstrong: The seven-time Tour de France winner was stripped of his titles after it was revealed that he had used performance-enhancing drugs throughout his career.

- Marion Jones: The American sprinter was stripped of her Olympic medals after it was revealed that she had used performance-enhancing drugs.
- Alberto Contador: The Spanish cyclist was banned for two years after testing positive for a banned substance.

Doping scandals have had a devastating impact on winter sports. They have eroded public trust in the sport, and have led to calls for stricter anti-doping measures.

Corruption Scandals

Corruption has also been a problem in winter sports. Officials have been accused of taking bribes, fixing competitions, and selling tickets illegally. Some of the most high-profile corruption scandals in recent years include:

- FIFA: The international governing body of soccer was rocked by a corruption scandal in 2015. Several high-ranking FIFA officials were arrested and charged with bribery, corruption, and racketeering.
- IOC: The International Olympic Committee was also embroiled in a corruption scandal in 2016. Several IOC members were accused of taking bribes in exchange for votes on which cities would host the Olympic Games.
- IAAF: The International Association of Athletics Federations was rocked by a corruption scandal in 2017. Several IAAF officials were accused of taking bribes in exchange for covering up doping violations.

Corruption scandals have had a damaging impact on winter sports. They have eroded public trust in the sport, and have led to calls for greater transparency and accountability.

The world of winter sports has been rocked by a series of scandals and controversies in recent years. These cases have involved everything from doping to corruption, and have tarnished the reputation of the sport. It is important to remember that these scandals are not representative of the vast majority of athletes and officials who compete in winter sports. The vast majority of athletes are clean and fair, and they deserve our respect and admiration.
